ENGINEERS LOCATE INTERURBAN ROUTE

When Line Is Located Right of Way Committee Will Go to Work.

A field party of five engineers in charge of chief engineer Leeper of the Stone Webster engineering corporation is now in the field locating the route for the valley line. As soon as this line is definitely located the right-of-way committee will complete its work. In the meantime an application for a charter to construct and operate the line will be asked from the state officials, at Austin in order that the law of eminent domain may be employed, if necessary, to secure all of the desired right-of-way. C. W. Kellogg, general manager of the El Paso Electric Railway company, is here from Dallas for a conference with the committee. M. M. Phinney, president of the company, is now expected about July 5. He was to have come this week but returned to Boston on business and will be 10 days late in reaching El Paso.

USES NEW TYPE OF CAR ON INTERURBAN LINE

The Weatherford, Mineral Wells & Northwestern railway, the Texas & Pacific interurban line, has begun operation between Dallas and Mineral Wells, Texas. The local T. & P. ticket office has received an application for a charter to construct and operate the line, a motor vehicle seating 80 persons. The trolleyless car is shaped like a torpedo, having round loopholes resembling a battleship.

BUT FIVE SMALLPOX CASES; ALL CANVALESCENT

There are only five cases of smallpox at the eruptive hospital. Four patients suffering with this disease were discharged as cured last week. All the remaining ones are expected to recover.

IMPOTANT TESTS MADE AT DAM

Hydraulic Press of 200,000
Pounds Capacity Used by Chemist Coghlan.

Elephant Butte, N. M., June 17.—Few are aware of the importance of the experiments being conducted in the laboratory at the dam by the government chemist, R. R. Coghlan. In connection with the laboratory is an hydraulic press of 200,000 pounds capacity. The purpose of this machine is to obtain the compressive strength of concrete to be used in the construction of the great dam. To this end cubes of concrete differing in proportions of ingredients are kept submerged in water for periods varying from seven days to many months.

Careful records are kept as to the varying proportions and time submerged, before being subject to pressure, resulting in an accurate knowledge of the best mixtures of sand and Portland cement for resistance to pressure and also impervious qualities.

On Friday morning two one to three motor cubes of 1014 bank sand cement, that had been submerged 28 days were tested in the hydraulic press. The first showed a compressive strength of 1350 pounds and the second of 1750 pounds, thus showing a compressive value of more than 4000 pounds per square inch. At the toe of the dam there will be a pressure of 25 tons per square foot or 550 pounds per square inch, being less than one-tenth as great as the compressive strength of the concrete to be used. This assures great security to the dam against failure from crushing and should also give assurance of safety to the people of the valley.

All concrete is more or less porous and it is important to obtain an article that will be most impervious to water. The test for permeability is made from specimens of concrete formed into cylinders three inches high and six inches in diameter. After the concrete has set the specimen is placed in a machine and subjected to a water pressure. The water passing through the specimen is caught and measured. In this manner the relative permeability of concrete of various proportions is obtained. That mixture of cement, sand and rock which allows the smallest amount of water to pass through during a given length of time is rated as the most impervious, as the permeability is also a measure of the density of the specimen and will be the strongest.

Similar experiments are being made by Mr. Coghlan in the laboratories at Boise, Ida., Luboutan, Nev., and North Yakima, Wash. Also here and at Boise coal tests are being made and water analysis is being conducted here for various projects.

HAPPER TELLS OF POST ENLARGEMENT

Coming the Second Cavalry
Puts Finishing Touches on Enlargement

Hard work the regimental post was won for El Paso. J. A. Harper, chairman of the chamber of commerce committee on post enlargement, who returned Saturday afternoon from Washington, D. C., has a strange story to tell of how, after months of lobbying, he succeeded in securing the military and industrial addition to this city. Fort Bliss, by order of the secretary of war, already is a regimental post, and on January 1 the actual enlargement will begin, he says. But it was by a hair's width that El Paso got it. By the arrival here of the entire second cavalry before the passage of the military bill, El Paso will receive the regimental post permanently. If the second had arrived 10 days later, this city probably would have lost out entirely. The bill provided that no post should be enlarged over the actual standing at the time of the passage of the bill. To have the second cavalry on the way back from island duty sent to El Paso was the assurance of gaining the permanent post here, for the second brings here the skeleton of a full regiment.

Had Delicate Task.
"It was my trouble," said Mr. Harper, "to keep the El Paso people from boosting for the fourth. I wanted the fourth to stay, here, too, as much as any, but the fourth here was only a squadron, and if that remained, the second might be sent elsewhere. I sent a lot of telegrams to El Paso people to warn them against a protest at the fourth's removal. That was the trouble."

The secretary of war has made Fort Bliss a regimental post. Now, under the provisions of the new bill, the commission headed by Gen. Young and MacArthur only has power to abandon a post or enlarge it, and since it is sure that Fort Bliss will not be abandoned, the post cannot be cut down from its present standing, that of a regimental post, with the entire second cavalry here.

Mr. Harper says that the 224 infantry and a battery of the third field artillery will remain here for the present, and that the 18th infantry will be sent home to Fort Whipple, Ariz.

Arizona's Help.
"The Arizona people boosting for Fort Huachuca helped a lot," said Mr. Harper. "Our interests were identical. No, if it hadn't been for the Mexican situation we could not have secured anything. Nothing too good can be said about congressman Curry of New Mexico. He worked for the bill like an El Pasoan. Our best friends were senators Culberson, Fall and Ashurst. Gen. Wood himself was stronger for the Fort Bliss enlargement than anyX and his recommendations helped a lot."

While the appropriation is made effective July 1, none of the money can be spent for post enlargements until September 1, Mr. Harper reports. But the war department has allowed the officers funds for quarters in El Paso. The Fort Bliss sewer will go in at once, and all will be prepared for the building of post quarters for the men and officers by September 1. In fact the war department already has secured prices on building materials from El Paso contractors.

THINKS HE IS MADRID AND WILL BE SHOT AT SUNRISE

Sunday morning Juan Ramirez, a former resident of Juarez, was laboring under the impression that he was president Francisco I. Madero. He was arrested and taken to a police station, where he was docketed on a charge of insanity.

Ramirez thought he was in the republic of Mexico, but the police finally persuaded him that he was in the United States, whereupon he declared that he would be shot at sunrise in pursuance to the order to that effect issued by president Roosevelt.
